Source was questioned regarding a gambling survey currently being conducted at the request of FBIHQ and provided the following information regarding sports wagering and euphemisms used in sports wagering.

Sports wages on baseball is figured on the home team and the pitcher. (Example) If BOB GIBSON was the home team pitcher and he was favored to win, a bet would be quoted as follows:

"GIBSON - $2.00 to win." The $2.00 figure would signify a bet of $200. If GIBSON was the home team pitcher figured to lose, the bet would be quoted as "GIBSON - $1.80 to lose." The $1.80 figure would indicate a wager of $180.

In basketball wagering the expression "lay" indicates a willingness to take the favorite and give up points. The expression "take" indicates a willingness to take the "dog" or underdog and take points. (Example) If the Bucks were two point favorites, a wager would be "Bucks lay two" or "Bucks minus two," A wager on the Bucks' opponents would be "Give me the dog plus two."

The following terminology is utilized by gamblers in the Milwaukee area:

"A push" - sport event results in exact tie with point spread. (Example) If Green Bay was six point favorites over Chicago, and the final score was Green Bay - 6, Bears - 0, this would be a push. Plural "pushes."

"Pick it game" - a sports contest in which opponents were considered equal. In basketball this would be quoted as -2 -2 take your pick. In football -1 -1 take your pick.

"Juice Line" - a booking operation which charges ten percent on losses and is in violation of commercial gambling laws. Quoted as "1.10 for losses; $1.00 paid for winnings."

"Buck" - A $100 wager

"Deuce" - A $200 wager

"Give me 4" - A $400 wager.
